

Test 4 Key

Reading and Use of English (1 hour 15 minutes)

Part 1

1 A 2 B 3 D 4 A 5 B 6 C 7 D 8 C

Part 2

9 would / could / might / can 10 needs / has 11 order 12 out / on 13 like 14 but / except 15 the / what 16 how

Part 3

17 Mexican 18 evidence 19 exciting 20 remarkable 21 significance
22 disagreement 23 discoveries 24 generally

Part 4

25 in CASE | it gets / becomes / turns / is
26 WISH I hadn't / had not | eaten
27 for | NOT doing / completing / finishing OR for | NOT having done / completed / finished
28 I would / I'd | have CAUGHT OR I would've | CAUGHT
29 it | wasn't / was not UNTIL
30 MUST have | gone

Part 5

31 C 32 C 33 A 34 B 35 D 36 B

Part 6

37 D 38 F 39 A 40 G 41 E 42 C

Part 7

43 C 44 D 45 B 46 C 47 A 48 D 49 B 50 A
51 B 52 D

Writing (1 hour 20 minutes)

Candidate responses are marked using the assessment scale on page 108.

Listening (approximately 40 minutes)

Part 1

1 A 2 A 3 A 4 B 5 A 6 A 7 C 8 C

Part 2

9 zoo 10 farmers 11 repairs 12 night work 13 wild dog / Wild Dog
14 (animal) reserves 15 the Internet OR Internet use 16 lake 17 (heavy) boots
18 gloves

Part 3

19 C 20 G 21 A 22 B 23 F

Part 4

24 A 25 B 26 B 27 C 28 A 29 B 30 A

Transcript

This is the Cambridge English: First for Schools, Test 4.

I'm going to give you the instructions for this test. I'll introduce each part of the test and give you time to look at the questions. At the start of each piece you'll hear this sound:

tone

You'll hear each piece twice.

Remember, while you're listening, write your answers on the question paper. You'll have five minutes at the end of the test to copy your answers onto the separate answer sheet.

There will now be a pause. Please ask any questions now, because you must not speak during the test.

[pause]

Now open your question paper and look at Part One.

[pause]

PART 1

You'll hear people talking in eight different situations. For questions 1–8, choose the best answer (A, B or C).

Question 1

One. You overhear two friends talking about a lesson they had at school.

[pause]

tone

- Girl: That was a brilliant science lesson, wasn't it?
- Boy: Yes, but I find it hard to get my head round some of those facts that astronomers have recently discovered. You know, like they think that it's fifty thousand degrees Celsius on that star they're researching. How can that be?
- Girl: I know what you mean. Or like it's a hundred and fifty times bigger than our sun. No wonder scientists are keen to find out more about it.
- Boy: That's right. They want to discover why it's on its own rather than in a cluster of other stars, like they usually are. It's very curious, isn't it?
- Girl: Sure is. I'd love to know the answer.

[pause]

tone

[The recording is repeated.]

[pause]

Question 2 Two. You hear two friends talking about buying a card game for the boy's sister.

[pause]

tone

- Boy: Shall I get this card game for my sister's birthday?
- Girl: How old is she? Seven?
- Boy: That's right. Do you think it's too old for her?
- Girl: Well, I didn't get it till I was ten, but I played it with my younger brother and he sometimes managed to beat me. It's quite easy once you get the hang of it, though it's hard at first to remember all the rules.
- Boy: So you need a bit of patience? My sister hasn't got any!
- Girl: That could be a problem then. Look, this board game here might be better.
- Boy: Thanks. That's certainly the sort of thing she'd enjoy.

[pause]

tone

[The recording is repeated.]

[pause]

Question 3 Three. You hear part of an interview on the radio with a writer of children's books.

[pause]

tone

Interviewer: Do you think films and TV have made storybooks less important for children today?

Writer: I don't think anything will ever replace books. They're the most intimate form of entertainment 'cause they make strange worlds and characters come alive for you. You can experience everything in your own way – thrills, fear, sadness – and you feel as if you're part of the story yourself. Films are, somehow, much more of a shared experience. You see and feel exactly what everyone else sees and feels. I'm not saying films aren't powerful too. A good film will stay with you forever just as a good book will.

[pause]

tone

[The recording is repeated.]

[pause]

Question 4 Four. You hear a guide speaking to tourists.

[pause]

tone

Guide: There are many fascinating things to see and people to talk to here at Barrow Hill Living Museum. The museum covers a large site and you'll find different exhibits open on different days and at different times of year. But whenever you choose to visit, you're sure to see an excellent range of exhibits and demonstrations, some indoors, others outside. It's up to you which order you see them in and how long you spend in each area. Some exhibits are simple displays for you to enjoy, others are staffed by actors who'll help to bring the past to life and answer any questions you may have.

[pause]

tone

[The recording is repeated.]

[pause]

Question 5 Five. You hear two friends talking about a music festival they are going to attend.

[pause]

tone

Man: I think it should be a great festival this year, don't you? Even better than last year's.

Woman: You're right! There are gonna be the same brilliant people there. There's that group, South Redemption. They were just amazing last year.

Man: Yes, I didn't see them but I like their songs. And as well as all the people they've already announced, they're promising an appearance by someone really famous.

Woman: I wonder who that could be.

Man: Well, they've said someone fantastic's going to be performing with Fatima Wheatley, someone she's never worked with before. I can't wait to find out who that'll be. And Fatima's got a great voice, of course – I did get to see her perform last year.

Woman: Yes, me too.

[pause]

tone

[The recording is repeated.]

[pause]

Question 6 Six. You hear two friends talking about a movie.

[pause]

tone

Man: Did you enjoy the movie, Melissa?

Woman: I actually liked it even more than the book it was based on – which I loved. The actors were brilliant – perfect for their roles.

Man: Well, some were. I've read the book too and I thought the hero should've been someone a bit taller and darker. But the others were OK. And at least the director didn't mess around with the story.

Woman: No, thank goodness. It would've spoilt things if he had. I was a bit disappointed by some of the visual effects – especially in the car chase – but otherwise it was great.

Man: Oh? I was actually quite impressed by that chase!

[pause]

tone

[The recording is repeated.]

[pause]

Question 7 Seven. You hear two friends talking about a news story about a baby monkey.

[pause]

tone

Man: Did you see that news item about that really unusual monkey?

Woman: You mean the baby one born in the French zoo? It was the cutest thing I've ever seen! I wish I was the zookeeper looking after it!

Man: I don't know about that. But it's such a pity that there's only a thousand of them left in the world.

Woman: It is a shame, but at least this one's getting well cared for.

Man: Yes, but it would be better off in the wild where it belongs.

Woman: I'm not so sure. It's safe and it's got plenty to eat where it is!

Man: It's not the same, though, as having a forest to roam around in, is it?

[pause]

tone

[The recording is repeated.]

[pause]

Question 8 Eight. You overhear two friends talking about their holidays.

[pause]

tone

Girl: How was your holiday, Ben? You went to New York, didn't you?

Boy: Actually, my dad decided against that in the end. We went to the mountains instead. My parents said they wanted some fresh air and a more active holiday.

Girl: Well, that sounds good too.

Boy: Mm. I was quite disappointed at first but I came round to it a bit when they said I could have some skiing lessons if I wanted. And now I'm so glad we went. I can't wait to go again.

Girl: Oh, I didn't know you could ski.

Boy: I couldn't. But I can now. My instructor was great.

[pause]

tone

[The recording is repeated.]

[pause]

That is the end of Part One.

Now turn to Part Two.

[pause]

PART 2

You'll hear a student called Shirley Bailey giving a talk at her school about her experience of working at a wildlife centre in Africa last summer. For questions 9–18, complete the sentences with a word or short phrase.

You now have forty-five seconds to look at Part Two.

[pause]

tone

- Shirley: Hi, everyone. Most of you know my name's Shirley. What you may not know is that I'm completely mad about animals and I wanted to work with them last summer. I've helped out at a horse riding school quite a bit, so I fancied something more exotic and I thought about the zoo. Fortunately, there's one close to where my Gran lives. When I enquired though, they'd already taken on their holiday staff, so I searched the Internet and found a wildlife centre called Greenwood in Namibia, which for those of you who aren't great at geography, like me, is in southern Africa. I applied and spent six fantastic weeks there.
- Greenwood don't only look after animals – they also train volunteer students like me and talk to the farmers about the benefits of conservation and the fact that tourists now are so keen to pay to see wildlife. So protecting the animals can actually bring in money, which is very much needed when the crops don't do well.
- The main job of a volunteer is, of course, to care for the animals, but I did do other things too, like doing repairs round the place, which was the most difficult thing because of the heat. I also did more laid-back tasks, like showing visitors round and answering loads of questions.
- My daily routine included feeding the animals, which was great fun, and cleaning out their enclosures – a horribly dirty job, as you'd expect. We also had a schedule for night work with the babies. I thought I'd hate it as generally I need my sleep! Staying awake the next day was certainly tricky, but I was amazed that I actually looked forward to watching over the little ones and holding them if they woke up.
- Over the past thirty years, Greenwood has been involved in the care of orphaned animals, including wild cats such as lions, leopards and cheetahs. But I was lucky enough to be working on what they referred to as the Wild Dog project, which involved identifying animals that need help, looking at family patterns of behaviour and recording their eating habits. I really loved it!
- Greenwood has developed really great systems for getting animals back to health. The aim, then, is to move them on from the centre if they can. It would be wonderful to set them free into their natural habitat, though that hardly ever happens, as they've become too used to being helped by humans. So they are usually moved to animal reserves, where they can be checked up on from time to time.
- Volunteers pay a weekly contribution to the centre in advance to cover accommodation and food, local transport and so on. You have to add flights on top, of course, but there really isn't much else to budget for once you're here except Internet use – as there aren't any shops selling souvenirs and that sort of thing nearby.

While you're at Greenwood, you stay in basic wooden cabins with three other volunteers. There's a sort of wooden balcony with armchairs, where we relaxed in the evening. What's great is that the cabins overlook a lake, so you can see different wild creatures coming to drink there in the evenings. It made a change after long days working at the centre.

So what about the stuff we had to take? I mainly packed shorts and T-shirts because it's very hot in the daytime. I thought initially that sandals would be useful, though we were told to bring heavy boots for protection when we were dealing with large animals.

The management also insisted that we wore gloves during our work time, which they always had a large supply of at the centre. That was very sensible, as was the instruction to bring a torch as the sun sets very quickly and it's so dark without street lights. Fortunately, I found a very powerful small one online and stuck that in my rucksack. It was so useful.

Now let me show you some pictures of the animals I liked best ...

[pause]

Now you'll hear Part Two again.

tone

[The recording is repeated.]

[pause]

That is the end of Part Two.

Now turn to Part Three.

[pause]

PART 3

You'll hear five short extracts in which teenagers are talking about the sports they take part in. For questions 19–23, choose from the list (A–H) what each speaker says about their sport. Use the letters only once. There are three extra letters which you do not need to use.

You now have thirty seconds to look at Part Three.

[pause]

tone

Speaker 1

[pause]

I've always loved all kinds of sport. Two years ago, I decided to join a local running club. That meant buying stuff like running shorts, of course, and proper running shoes, which are different from ordinary trainers. It's a good thing I enjoy running because I didn't realise quite what a commitment being in a club would be. A competition can last anything from an afternoon to a whole weekend – then there's several nights' training every week too. What's great now is that my brother and some of my friends have joined the club as well. We have such a great time that we don't even mind if the weather's not brilliant.

[pause]

Speaker 2

[pause]

I joined a hockey club near where we live. I love it, even though I'm usually pretty tired after a game 'cause it involves lots of running. You get really dirty too, but I don't mind that. My aunt got me into it and even lent me some kit, you know the stick, special boots and padding. The ball's quite hard so you need to be protected against injury. I'm quite glad I'm not in goal 'cause the keeper has to wear a helmet and even more padding. We practise for one or two hours each week, then play against other teams most weekends.

[pause]

Speaker 3

[pause]

When I was younger, I played tennis with my cousin. We went to a kids' summer course and had great fun, so I decided to take it up seriously and I joined a club. I really improved, but I was worried when my coach suggested I was ready to do competitions. I found I liked them more than I expected to, though. Then I twisted my ankle during training and I couldn't play for several weeks. I was upset about that, but I'm back to playing now and it's great because the club has recently built a couple of new courts for us to use.

[pause]

Speaker 4

[pause]

I've got a basketball hoop at home and I'm always practising and trying out new moves with my best friend. So it was great when our school decided to get a basketball team together. We were given our team shirts, but not trainers, and we all had to buy a mouthguard to protect our teeth as well. We practise about three hours every week and have to do running and keep-fit exercises too. Mum's booked me into the basketball camp for the school holidays next month. They've got great coaches and I should be able to make some progress with my ball-handling techniques for competitions against other schools next year.

[pause]

Speaker 5

[pause]

I love riding my bike. So when a cycling club for teenagers started in my area, I couldn't wait to sign up and Dad eventually agreed to pay for it. Now I race both on roads and on a special track. I really enjoy the training sessions as well as the competitions we sometimes do. And I don't mind how long I spend out on my bike, except when it's wet – that can make things a bit miserable. Some of my friends have joined the club too. Of course, you can get problems with your bike when you're racing, so we've all had to do a course in how to do bike repairs.

[pause]

Now you'll hear Part Three again.

tone

[The recording is repeated.]

[pause]

That is the end of Part Three.

Now turn to Part Four.

[pause]

PART 4

You'll hear part of an interview with Roberto Gianni. For questions 24–30, choose the best answer (A, B or C).

You now have one minute to look at Part Four.

[pause]

tone

Interviewer: Today in the studio we have twenty-five year-old Roberto Gianni, who's one of the country's youngest successful fashion designers. Roberto's going to answer questions sent in by teenage listeners. First up, Rachel, who's fifteen, asks: 'What made you want to design clothes?'

Roberto: I used to go to a youth club which had a fashion workshop. It was basically a lot of teenagers customising clothes. That is, they'd take fairly boring jeans or T-shirts and sew stuff on or cut bits out and stitch other bits on. I went with friends. We wanted to make our clothes stand out in a crowd, but I got a bit bored after a while 'cause I wanted to follow my own designs and do things from scratch. So I decided to make something to prove to my mates that I could do that.

Interviewer: So what happened then? Jamie, from Edinburgh, asks how you broke into the fashion industry.

Roberto: Well, the people at the youth club were quite impressed with what I'd made, but actually I was still at college and had no real interest in fashion at all at that stage. Anyway, the leaders at the youth club put me in for a competition. It was sponsored by a well-known fashion magazine. I ended up with first prize for the things I'd done and doors started opening pretty soon after that!

Interviewer: Next, Irina, who's sixteen, asks: 'How do you feel about your current designs?'

Roberto: My very first creation at the youth club was an evening dress for my sister. It took me some time 'cause I'd never sewn before. Amazingly, what I produced wasn't too bad. I then did some kids' clothes for my nephews and nieces. They seemed pleased with the result. So I branched out a bit and did some menswear, which came in for a lot of praise. But I knew I could do even better. These days I'm managing to create a modern urban look. It appeals to me anyway!

Interviewer: Next, Graham asks: 'What or who is your biggest influence when it comes to fashion?'

Roberto: That's a tricky one. I guess most people would say that it's someone really well-known – designers like Paul Smith or Alexander MacQueen. I'm nostalgic about the style of clothes in the 1950s that's reflected in my work. Of course, I go to all the big fashion shows, but I try to make sure that what I see there doesn't change what I'm doing too much.

Interviewer: Now, your sister's quite a famous model. Mike asks if all your family's in the fashion business.

Roberto: Not at all, no. When my parents found out I wanted to design clothes, they didn't know quite what to think. They'd assumed I'd go into education – they're both teachers – but they realised I was determined, so they backed me all the way. They knew once I'd made up my mind, that was it.

Interviewer: Paul, from London, wants to know how you cope with criticism.

Roberto: The public sometimes doesn't go for individuality and I try not to take any negative comments to heart – though that's tough sometimes. I just carry on regardless because I have a faith in what I do, and that's not easily shaken. There's always a feeling with some people that everyone has to look the same. That's not something I'm into, but I don't mind them being like that.

Interviewer: Finally, a number of people have asked if you have any advice for young people trying to get into the fashion industry today.

Roberto: I guess, know yourself. This industry can crush you, change your views and change you. This can happen, especially if you do a traditional college course, even a good one. I'd say, get a job where you're also going to get some training, like with a photographer or on a magazine. Put together a portfolio which shows a few of your ideas, don't go over the top on this though.

Interviewer: Roberto, many thanks for coming ...

[pause]

Now you'll hear Part Four again.

tone

[The recording is repeated.]

[pause]

That is the end of Part Four.

There will now be a pause of five minutes for you to copy your answers onto the separate answer sheet. Be sure to follow the numbering of all the questions. I'll remind you when there's one minute left, so that you're sure to finish in time.

[Teacher, pause the recording here for five minutes. Remind students when they have one minute left.]

That is the end of the test. Please stop now. Your supervisor will now collect all the question papers and answer sheets.