

Test 4

READING AND USE OF ENGLISH (1 hour 15 minutes)

Part 1

For questions 1–8, read the text below and decide which answer (A, B, C or D) best fits each gap. There is an example at the beginning (0).

Mark your answers on the separate answer sheet.

Example:

0 A firstly B primarily C centrally D substantially

0	A	B	C	D
	☐	☒	☐	☐

Ice cream in Italy

Ice cream was long believed to be a luxury enjoyed (0) by a wealthy elite in Italy until the late 19th century. This was because ice cream making (1) for large quantities of ice before the (2) use of industrial refrigeration. Collecting ice from mountains, (3) it to cities and then (4) it throughout the summer was expensive. In fact, ice was valued so highly that it was taxed and its price (5) by the government, along with more common staples such as grain and oil.

However, research by cultural historian Dr Melissa Calaresu now (6) that at that time ice cream was actually consumed by a wider range of people than previously (7) Dr Calaresu based her findings partly on 18th-century engravings of Italian street (8) , some clearly portraying raggedly dressed children eating frozen desserts being sold by people holding large wooden buckets.

- | | | | | |
|---|--------------|--------------|--------------|------------|
| 1 | A asked | B searched | C sent | D called |
| 2 | A widespread | B unlimited | C usual | D enormous |
| 3 | A making | B finding | C getting | D putting |
| 4 | A reserving | B supporting | C storing | D lasting |
| 5 | A controlled | B organised | C run | D led |
| 6 | A tells | B suggests | C informs | D points |
| 7 | A thought | B felt | C considered | D regarded |
| 8 | A sights | B points | C views | D scenes |

Part 2

For questions 9–16, read the text below and think of the word which best fits each gap. Use only one word in each gap. There is an example at the beginning (0).

Write your answers IN CAPITAL LETTERS on the separate answer sheet.

Example:

0

I	N
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

An ancient plant

Russian scientists have succeeded (0) growing an ancient plant using a remarkable method of reconstruction. (9) some 30,000 years, fruit from the plant lay undisturbed in the frozen soil of Siberia until the scientists unearthed it. The fruit (10) been buried in the ground by rodents. Further layers of soil gradually covered the rodents' store, eventually leaving it 38 metres beneath the frozen ground, (11) kept the contents well preserved.

The scientists used the fruit to reproduce a plant, and in (12) way created a specimen bearing flowers and fertile seeds. At first, the scientists believed the reconstituted plant to (13) a member of an existing species. But as (14) as its white flowers appeared, the scientists saw that the petals were narrower and less clearly separated than those of today's species. Other biologists say that (15) is remarkable that the Russian scientists could use the fruit for reproduction after such (16) incredible length of time.

Test 4

Part 4

For questions 25–30, complete the second sentence so that it has a similar meaning to the first sentence, using the word given. Do not change the word given. You must use between two and five words, including the word given. Here is an example (0).

Example:

- 0 A very friendly taxi driver drove us into town.

DRIVEN

We a very friendly taxi driver.

The gap can be filled by the words 'were driven into town by', so you write:

Example:

0	WERE DRIVEN INTO TOWN BY
---	---------------------------------

Write only the missing words IN CAPITAL LETTERS on the separate answer sheet.

- 25 I don't know as much about apps as you, because you've used them a lot.

FAMILIAR

You're I am, because you've used them a lot.

- 26 In spite of the heavy rain, we went on our hike yesterday.

RAINING

We went on our hike yesterday even heavily.

- 27 Paul asked me if I wanted to go to the cinema or the theatre.

RATHER

Paul said, '..... the cinema or the theatre?'

- 28 We have many similar ideas about art.

QUITE

There few similarities in our ideas about art.

- 29 An international company has bought our family business.

TAKEN

Our family business an international company.

- 30 Greta has decided she doesn't want to go to the chess club meetings any longer.

GIVE

Greta has decided to the chess club meetings.

Part 5

You are going to read an extract from an article by a woman called Emma Svensson, who loves climbing mountains. For questions 31–36, choose the answer (A, B, C or D) which you think fits best according to the text.

Mark your answers on the separate answer sheet.

An unusual personal challenge

A few years ago, on a flight to New Zealand, I watched the film Everest, in which adventurers get stuck on the mountain in a tremendous snowstorm. I immediately knew I had to start climbing. It's not the reaction most people have, because almost everyone in the film meets a tragic end; I think I just needed to do some adventurous things. And six months later I climbed my first mountain, Mount Whitney in California, 4,421m high.

In 2017, I decided to climb the highest peak in every European country – officially 49 mountains – in one year. Only a handful of people had ever managed this feat. Though I'd never been a serious adventurer, I'd always been encouraged by my father to be active outdoors. I just wanted to be a role model for girls and get across to them that someone ordinary like me could climb mountains. It seemed there was a good story for someone to tell.

In Holland, Belgium and Denmark, the highest peaks are really just small hills. It didn't seem right to call it climbing but I hiked up them regardless. I didn't do any special preparation for the most challenging mountain, which was Mount Elbrus in Russia, Europe's highest at 5,642m. I knew that would be an exhausting climb, but I thought I'd get fit for it by climbing the others, and I did. I made an itinerary, starting in Switzerland with Dufourspitze (4,634m), but a snowstorm made me cancel. So I went to Spain instead. After that, I planned around the climate conditions. I did two big mountain tours around Europe and the rest I did on weekends.

Climbing mountains is an experience that's hard to put into words. You're in a beautiful environment and, when you reach the top, you feel incredible. But then you have to climb down, which is when most accidents happen – people are tired, it gets dark, it's harder. I don't climb mountains that I know I'm not really up to tackling. I wouldn't climb Mount Everest tomorrow, but each mountain I climb takes me on to the next one.

I wanted to end the project at home, on Sweden's Kebnekaise (2,095m). It has two peaks: the north is rocky and the south, which was always the higher one, is glacial. But with climate change, the south peak has been melting, and two days after I climbed it, the north became the higher summit, so I did that as my final climb, taking a photographer to record the moment. Once I reached the top he took a number of photos, and that in a way reminded me of being at work – I'm a fashion photographer. It didn't feel as special as I'd hoped. But when I posted the results on social media and people congratulated me, I felt proud. line 55

I spent about €50,000, double what I'd planned, and I eventually climbed 61 mountains in Europe. In the UK, I climbed the highest mountains in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. I also climbed mountains on the Isle of Man and on two of the Channel Islands – Guernsey and Jersey. In Kosovo there are two mountains, and no one knows which is higher, so I climbed both. I also went on afterwards to climb four in Peru, and one in Argentina, just for the experience.

One thing about climbing is that you have to work on your weak points. For example, I want to be in control of things all the time, but you can't control anything on a mountain – the weather, unusual circumstances. So I had to learn to accept that. Also I prefer to climb alone, which may appear brave, but it's hard and not always advisable, as I've found out. Of course, climbing is wonderful and it makes you so much tougher, physically and mentally.

- 31 What was Emma's aim in climbing the highest peak in each European country?
- A to show young women that they could take on big challenges
 - B to achieve something that hardly anyone had done before
 - C to make her father feel that she had listened to his advice
 - D to provide her with material for a book she was planning
- 32 In the third paragraph, Emma explains that she discovered the importance of
- A making sure she was in good shape physically before she set out.
 - B sticking to her travel plan no matter what else was happening.
 - C taking the likely weather into account when arranging trips.
 - D starting with the lowest mountains and working her way up.
- 33 What do we learn about Emma in the fourth paragraph?
- A She is aware of her own limitations and will not go beyond them.
 - B She is sad that she cannot describe her feelings more imaginatively.
 - C She is very ambitious and wants to progress quickly to the highest peaks.
 - D She is conscious of being careless sometimes when descending mountains.
- 34 What does 'it' mean in line 55?
- A taking a number of photos
 - B reaching the final summit
 - C climbing two peaks instead of one
 - D working as a fashion photographer
- 35 From the sixth paragraph, we can understand that Emma
- A would really like to climb the world's highest mountains.
 - B sees the project as an entertaining way to fill free time.
 - C likes to do a thorough job when she takes on a project.
 - D would have done things differently if she had known the likely costs.
- 36 In the final paragraph, Emma says that climbing mountains has taught her to
- A appreciate the benefits of doing challenging activities on her own.
 - B recognise that physical strength is the most valuable resource.
 - C work out successful ways to deal with unforeseen problems.
 - D focus on trying to improve certain failings in her character.

Part 6

You are going to read an article about returning wolves to a national park in the US. Six sentences have been removed from the article. Choose from the sentences A–G the one which fits each gap (37–42). There is one extra sentence which you do not need to use.

Mark your answers on the separate answer sheet.

The return of wolves to Yellowstone National Park

In 1995, wolves were reintroduced to Yellowstone, America's first national park. The ecosystem there had become dangerously unstable owing to the extermination of these top predators. This huge undertaking marked the first deliberate attempt to return a major carnivore to a large ecosystem.

Now, over 25 years later, scientists are celebrating the grey wolves' successful return from the edge of extinction as one of the greatest examples of species reintroduction the world has ever seen. 37 This debate is likely to continue for some time despite the success of the project.

Centuries ago, wolves had spread from the Arctic to Mexico, but from the 1870s onwards they were hunted to extinction across the US. By 1926, the last wolf pack had been killed in Yellowstone by park employees, as part of the policy of the time to eliminate all predators. They were traditionally portrayed in folk tales as a danger to humans and a menace to farmers' incomes. 38 In fact, statistics show that they only kill 0.2% to 0.3% of available livestock.

The need for restoration was obvious. 39 Populations of animals such as coyotes and elk were exploding, with the latter causing overgrazing of willows and aspens. Without those trees, songbirds began to decline, beavers could no longer build their dams and riverbanks started to erode. Without beaver dams and the shade from trees and other plants, water temperatures were too high for cold-water fish.

In 1995, in collaboration with Canadian agencies, 14 wolves were captured in Jasper National Park and brought to Yellowstone. As the wolves were transported through the park in trailers, people lined the roads to be part of the historic event. When the trailers stopped, people came up and asked if they could have a photo, even though the wolves weren't visible. 40 It is something that is clearly felt by visitors to the park even today.

Scientists always knew that as the top predator, wolves were the missing piece in this ecosystem. 41 The elk and deer populations started responding immediately. Within about 10 years, willows grew back. In 20, the aspen began flourishing. Riverbanks stabilized. Songbirds reappeared, as did beavers, eagles, foxes and badgers. And those are just the things scientists have had the time and funding to study.

While the restoration of wolves in Yellowstone has cost about $30m, wolf ecotourism brings in $35m annually in an economic boom for the surrounding communities. Wild wolves are generally shy and prefer remote areas. This is why Yellowstone, which now contains large numbers, is the best place to observe them. 42 As a result, wolf research in the park is considered far more advanced than anywhere else.

Jamie Rappaport Clark, president and CEO of Defenders of Wildlife, which organized political support and legal actions for the reintroduction, describes the restoration as a defining moment in his career.

- | | |
|--|---|
| A That legend continues to this day, although wolves very rarely attack people or domestic animals – far less than cougars and bears do. B In Yellowstone, the wolves were kept in secure enclosures for several weeks to prevent their instincts from leading them back to their former home. C This is as true for scientists as it is for tourists. D In the 70 years of the wolves' absence, the entire Yellowstone ecosystem had fallen out of balance. | E But they were astonished at the rapidity with which their reintroduction stimulated a transformation. F But because wolves are one of the most feared animals on the planet, the value of doing this remains fiercely contested. G Such action indicates the powerful fascination there is with wolves. |
|--|---|

Part 7

You are going to read a magazine article about video games. For questions 43–52, choose from the reviews (A–D). The reviews may be chosen more than once.

Mark your answers on the separate answer sheet.

Which reviewer

welcomes the fact that players are not constantly returned to their starting point?

43 appreciates the fact that the characters in the game are realistic?

44

warns against judging the game by its initial appearance?

45

points out that players perform actions that are impossible outside the game?

46

feels that any weaknesses the game has are relatively trivial?

47 regrets that so little support is available for players?

48 explains why players should limit their activity levels within the game?

49

praises the way a straightforward concept has been put into practice?

50

comments that a feature of the game would not usually be so evident?

51

claims that the game is currently unique?

52

Reviews of video games

- A In Stardew Valley, you get a farm up and running by first making a patch of land useable. Then you plant, tend and ultimately sell crops to build up a stable income. You may start off producing a few parsnips, but soon you'll have a steady supply of beans and potatoes, and then move on to fancier products like eggs and olive oil, which will make you feel like you've really achieved something! You can supplement your earnings by heading out into the forest to look for berries or go fishing. Everything you do consumes energy in the game, so you'll have to keep an eye on how much work you do, or you'll be told you've collapsed from exhaustion. There's a town nearby filled with people to befriend and bargain with. Unlike in some other games, the residents feel like the kind of people you might actually meet there.
- B The player in Mini Metro is an underground transport designer in a world where stations and passengers are plain, geometric shapes. It's based on a simple idea, but executed superbly. The various cities start with a river and three stations that can be connected. Passengers ping into existence needing to be carried to destinations, and new destinations must regularly be integrated into the growing network. The pressure is then increased as both the geography and variety of stations are steadily expanded. Upgrades must be chosen carefully – central stations, new lines, tunnels or trains – as when it all gets too complicated, everything comes crashing down. Then it's all about starting again with a brand-new network and fresh hopes to keep things organised. The game may not look particularly sophisticated at first, but don't let that fool you – it hides within it a hugely complex and addictive challenge for players of all ages.
- C As is the case with most puzzle games, players of Monument Valley try to get from Point A to Point B. In this game you're walking through a city. You can drag and turn parts of certain buildings to create a path from one area to the next. Sometimes, stepping on particular squares will change gravity and have you walking along the side of a wall. The game's physics is based on perception, so if you're able to position elements so there appears to be a path, you can use it, even if that path wouldn't exist in the real world. It's certain to be unlike any game you've ever played (until, of course, the inevitable imitations come out). Not much is offered in the way of help, though; although it's nice to have a game not talk down to players, this is one that could have done with some handholding in the early levels to ease people into the different style of play.
- D Music in video games often gets overlooked: when sound design works, it tends to fade into the background – it only seems like it gets noticed when it's poor. Alto's Odyssey is one of the exceptions to this rule, as it has a stunning soundtrack that stands out even among the game's beautiful background landscapes. The game itself involves controlling a snowboarder and steering past different hazards such as cliffs and rocks to achieve high scores. When your snowboarder crashes, you carry on again from the place where it happened. This sets the game apart from those which always send you right back to the beginning, and it makes a pleasant change. However, every time you crash, the music cuts – a surprisingly annoying experience. In the end, though, any complaints I have about this game are small compared to all the aspects that the game gets right.

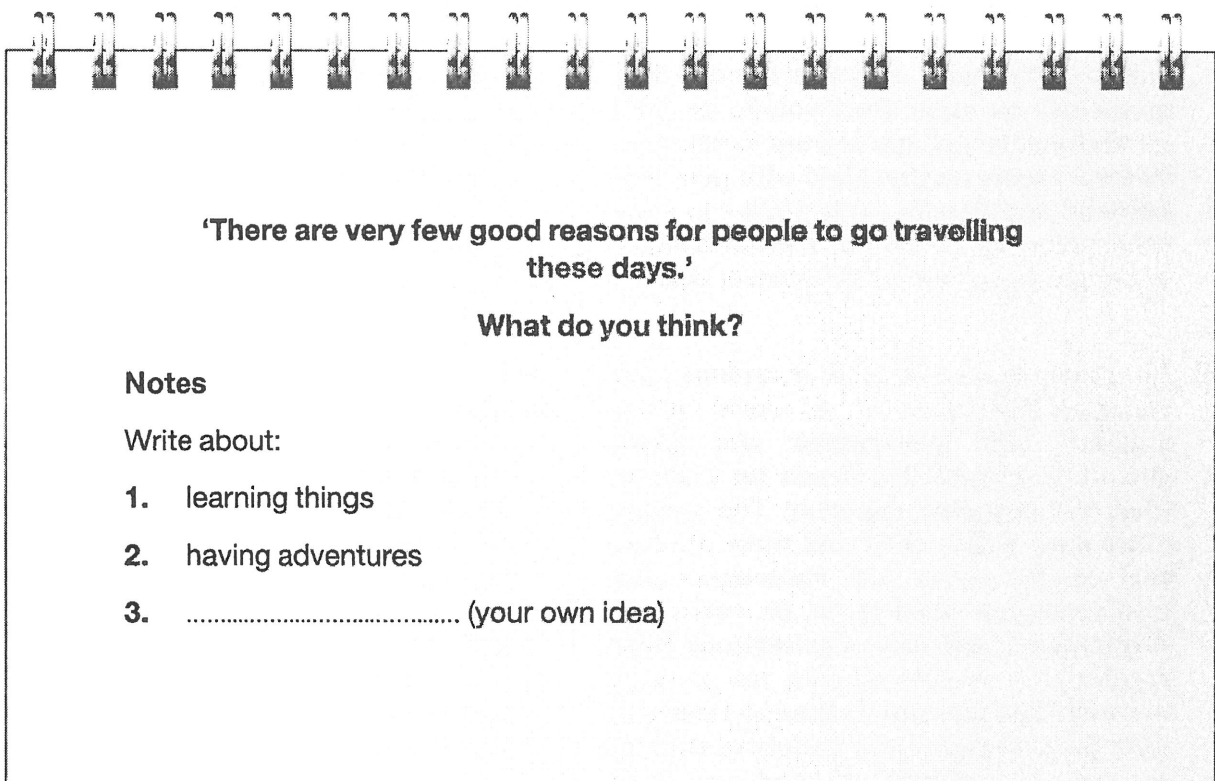

WRITING (1 hour 20 minutes)

Part 1

You must answer this question. Write your answer in 140–190 words in an appropriate style on the separate answer sheet.

- 1 In your English class you have been talking about travelling. Now, your English teacher has asked you to write an essay.

Write your essay using all the notes and giving reasons for your point of view.

'There are very few good reasons for people to go travelling these days.'

What do you think?

Notes

Write about:

1. learning things
2. having adventures
3. (your own idea)

Part 2

Write an answer to one of the questions 2–4 in this part. Write your answer in 140–190 words in an appropriate style on the separate answer sheet. Put the question number in the box at the top of the answer sheet.

- 2 You see this announcement on an English-language website.

Reviews wanted

A TV cookery programme!

Write a review of a cookery programme you have seen on TV.
 What did you like and dislike about the programme?
 Have you tried to make any of the dishes that were on the programme?
 How successful were you?

The best reviews will be published on our website.

Write your review.

- 3 You are studying in Canada and see this notice.

Environmental Workers Wanted

Our organisation is looking for people to work on our Rivers Project this summer.

You will need to help with:

- counting and photographing animals and plants
- doing scientific experiments
- cleaning up the river environment.

Write to the project director, Ramona Rideout, explaining why you are suitable.

Write your letter of application.

- 4 You see this announcement on an English-language website.

Articles wanted

A place I like

Tell us about a place where you particularly enjoy spending time.
 It could be somewhere in your town or area, or even somewhere in your own home!
 What do you do in this place? And what makes it so special for you?

The best articles will be posted on our website.

Write your article.

LISTENING (approximately 40 minutes)

Part 1

You will hear people talking in eight different situations.
For questions 1–8, choose the best answer (A, B or C).

Listening test audio

- 1 You hear a girl telling a friend about a radio programme she listened to.
How did she feel about it?
A pleased to have learnt so much
B curious to learn more about a subject
C surprised by the range of topics covered
- 2 You hear a man telling a friend about coaching young football players.
What does he hope they will learn?
A the rewards of hard work
B the value of respect for one another
C the benefits of staying fit and healthy
- 3 You hear a woman telling a friend about some photographs she's taken.
What was she disappointed about?
A The main subject wasn't always clearly visible in them.
B There was too little activity in some of them.
C One or two of them were far too dark.
- 4 You hear part of an interview with a woman who works as a hairdresser in the film industry.
What is she describing?
A how she dealt with an unusual problem
B how she corrected a mistake that she'd made
C how she persuaded someone to go with her ideas

- 5 You hear part of a podcast about applying to work for an airline.
When she was invited to the open day, the speaker was
- A unaware of the real purpose of the event.
 - B keen to treat it as a learning experience.
 - C annoyed not to have time to prepare.
- 6 You hear two friends talking about the migration of birds.
How does the woman feel about the long journeys the birds make?
- A impressed by their ability to survive
 - B surprised by how few stops they need to make
 - C interested to learn about how they find their way
- 7 You hear a man talking to his friend about training for a marathon.
How does the man feel about it?
- A bothered that he won't be taken seriously by his competitors
 - B concerned that he's trying to do too much in the sessions
 - C disappointed that he's not improving more quickly
- 8 You hear a man telling a friend about his new job.
What does he like about it?
- A The hours are flexible.
 - B The work is demanding.
 - C His boss is communicative.

Part 2

You will hear a man called Tim Opie talking about setting up and running a small restaurant.

For questions 9–18, complete the sentences with a word or short phrase.

Running a restaurant

Tim runs a restaurant called (9) '.....'.

Tim's brother helped him to design a (10) for the restaurant.

Tim found a place to rent next to a (11) in the city centre.

When it came to getting furniture, Tim bought some

(12) from a neighbour.

Tim chose plates with a pattern of (13) on them.

The first person Tim hired was a (14) to work in the restaurant.

The only food the restaurant's customers didn't like on the opening night were the (15)

Tim says that the most important thing he has learned is how to reduce

(16)

Tim hadn't expected to have to (17) so often.

Tim is going on a course to find out more about cooking without using

(18)

Part 3

You will hear five people talking about a cycle ride they recently went on. For questions 19–23, choose from the list (A–H) what each speaker enjoyed most. Use the letters only once. There are three extra letters which you do not need to use.

Listening test audio

A finding they were able to tackle a tricky section successfully

B witnessing a particular event

Speaker 1

	19
--	----

C experiencing complete contrasts

Speaker 2

	20
--	----

D taking part in an organised activity along the way

Speaker 3

	21
--	----

E stopping at the most scenic spot on the route

Speaker 4

	22
--	----

F rewarding themselves for the distance they'd covered

Speaker 5

	23
--	----

G getting to compare their rides with other cyclists

H cycling through countryside that hadn't changed over time

Part 4

You will hear an interview with a woman called Cherry Smithson, who is a fashion photographer. For questions 24–30, choose the best answer (A, B or C).

Listening test audio

-
- 24 What does Cherry say about her photographic style?
- A She prefers to choose unusual locations.
 - B She likes to use ideas from models.
 - C She tends to vary her approach.
- 25 Why did Cherry become a fashion photographer?
- A She was fascinated by the clothes industry.
 - B She realised she could combine two existing interests.
 - C She found the subject she was studying dull.
- 26 Cherry believes that the hardest part of fashion photography is
- A building up a good collection of work.
 - B getting the most out of a creative team.
 - C advertising the work she does.
- 27 The most appealing thing about photography for Cherry is the way that
- A a good photo does not need to be explained.
 - B she has a strong influence on how the photo will turn out.
 - C the contacts she makes help her to improve her skills.
- 28 What does Cherry say about her favourite photo?
- A She had planned it very carefully.
 - B She noticed details that could be improved.
 - C She liked the way everything worked out.

- 29 How does Cherry feel about the blog she has started?
- A pleased that it has received such positive feedback
 - B confident about how to further develop it in the future
 - C grateful to the professionals who contribute to it
- 30 What advice does Cherry give would-be fashion photographers?
- A Do not let criticism affect the way you work.
 - B Do not become too confident about your success.
 - C Do not take every assignment that you are offered.