

Test 4

READING AND USE OF ENGLISH (1 hour 15 minutes)

Part 1

Questions 1–8

For each question, choose the correct answer.
Mark your answers on the separate answer sheet.

What is the Bechdel test?

The Bechdel test is a measure of how women are represented in film and other forms of fiction. It is 1 after a 1985 comic strip in a feminist newspaper by cartoonist and writer Alison Bechdel.

At one 2 in the comic strip, two women are seen discussing movies. One of them remarks that she will only see a film if it 3 a certain requirement. This is that the film must 4 at least two women speaking to each other about something other than a man. One version of the test requires the two women to speak more than five words to each other.

Bechdel has said that her friend Liz Wallace came 5 with the idea. Bechdel has said it was also 6 by the feminist writings of English writer Virginia Woolf. Though Bechdel 7 the test to be a joke, it has been taken seriously by film critics. It is now widely used by academics and journalists as a tool for investigating representations of women – not 8 in films, but also in video games, televisions shows, theatrical plays and literature.

Test 4

- | | | | | |
|---|---------------|-------------|---------------|------------|
| 1 | A called | B termed | C labelled | D named |
| 2 | A spot | B phase | C situation | D point |
| 3 | A meets | B ensures | C manages | D confirms |
| 4 | A demonstrate | B appear | C feature | D display |
| 5 | A out | B up | C on | D down |
| 6 | A moved | B persuaded | C convinced | D inspired |
| 7 | A aimed | B meant | C proposed | D tried |
| 8 | A entirely | B wholly | C exclusively | D fully |

Part 2

Questions 9–16

For each question, write the correct answer.
Write one word for each gap.
Write your answers IN CAPITAL LETTERS on the separate answer sheet.

The environmental impact of surfing

For anyone who enjoys the sport of surfing, being out in the natural environment is part of the appeal. So, it's surprising that the sport relies so heavily 9 equipment made from plastics 10 as neoprene, that have a large carbon footprint. Neoprene is very durable and strong, making it a great choice for wetsuits. Even so, with lots of use, a typical wetsuit only lasts two years before needing to be replaced. 11 a result, almost 9,000 tonnes of the material ends 12 in landfill each year, where it takes years to decompose. What's 13 , in the manufacture of this fabric, harmful toxins are released into the atmosphere – affecting both humans and wildlife.

But now, encouraged by some top surfers, the industry is changing. Customers are being asked to send wetsuits back for repair rather 14 throwing them away, and 15 is a plan to create a recycling service in 16 material from old suits is used to make new ones.

Part 3

Questions 17–24

Read the text below. Use the word given in CAPITALS on the right to form a word that fits in the gap.
Write your answers IN CAPITAL LETTERS on the separate answer sheet.

Cities of the future

Cities are exciting places where there's often a lot going on. They offer a great 17 of job opportunities, as well as a wide selection of leisure 18 Although cities cover only around 3% of the world's land surface, they're seeing the most rapid 19 in population and they account for 75% of energy consumption.

In 20 to contributing significantly to global warming by releasing large amounts of carbon dioxide, cities are also at great risk from climate change. For example, concrete is used in the construction of 21 , roads and so on, and it absorbs heat, keeping the temperature higher than in the surrounding countryside.

Urban agriculture projects represent one way of bringing about a 22 in the carbon footprint of citizens. By encouraging the cultivation of more 23 produced food, it's possible to cut down the 24 that food travels from farm to plate. The creation of rooftop farming projects is one way of achieving this.

Keyword List

- 17 VARY
- 18 ACTIVE
- 19 GROW
- 20 ADD
- 21 BUILD
- 22 REDUCE
- 23 LOCAL
- 24 DISTANT

Part 4

Questions 25–30

For each question, complete the second sentence so that it means the same as the first, using the word given. Do not change the word given. You must use between two and five words, including the word given.
Write only the missing words IN CAPITAL LETTERS on the separate answer sheet.

25 I didn't mean to frighten you with those stories.

INTENTION

It frighten you with those stories.

26 The train's scheduled arrival time in London is nine o'clock.

GET

The train is scheduled nine o'clock.

27 Whenever I met my brother, he did nothing but gossip about his neighbours.

ONLY

Whenever I met my brother, the gossip about his neighbours.

28 The caretaker has to make sure that all the outer doors are locked at the end of the day.

RESPONSIBLE

The caretaker sure that all the outer doors are locked at the end of the day.

Test 4

29 Jason says he wants to stay at home tonight.

RATHER

Jason says he out tonight.

30 Because it is forecast to rain tomorrow, the sports day will probably be cancelled.

CALLED

Tomorrow's sports day is likely because rain is forecast.

Part 5

Questions 31–36

Read an article about swimming outdoors in Australia. For each question, choose the correct answer.

Mark your answers on the separate answer sheet.

Cold-water immersion in the Australian rainforest – and a catfish

Last summer, I decided to test the health benefits of cold-water immersion – sitting still in cold water up to my neck. And yes, it's possible I'd followed a few too many podcasts on the topic, but also I was looking for an achievable goal. I was hopeful that if I developed the habit in warmer weather, I'd be able to carry it on into the cooler months. Near where I live in northern New South Wales, there's a waterhole I've swum in since childhood, and it seemed the perfect place to start.

So early one morning, I headed off through the rainforest. The air was already warm, and though I was barely awake, the path was familiar. In a few minutes the waterhole came into view, dark and mysterious in the dawn light. I knew the trick was to leap in as quickly as possible. I gasped as I entered the water, but it wasn't quite as great a shock as I suspected it should have been. I swam towards a massive rock and sat on an underwater ledge. I'd chosen this seat as I knew it was as far away from catfish nests as possible. These are usually found in shallow, slower-flowing water. They're visible from above, if you know what you're looking for: an oval-shaped formation of rocks, polished clean, with a catfish patrolling it. Catfish are usually about 40cm long and easy to spot. Their nests are to be avoided because catfish are territorial and will attack if you stand there too long.

It's many years since I've been attacked by a catfish, as I never disturb their nests, but unsuspecting visitors sometimes are. They'll be standing happily in the shallows and – bang – a catfish will whack an ankle with some force. This is a warning. If they don't leap away quickly enough, there may be a second, harder whack.

That summer morning, sitting on the rock ledge with water up to my neck, I felt safe. I watched the flickering leaves above, and took in the slow tick of the forest. My mind was empty. Then there was a brush against my thigh, feather-light. I looked down and it was a catfish. I'd known this waterhole my entire life and I'd never seen one approach so far from the nest. Time's up, I thought, and paddled to the bank.

The next morning, however, I followed the same routine: the sleepy walk, the unhesitating entry. I hadn't been put off. But when I swam towards my rock ledge, the catfish was already there. 'Geez,' I thought, 'maybe it's his spot.' I chose a sandy patch further along. A minute or so went by and I saw it slink towards me. What was it doing? I'm not scared of catfish; I've known them all my life. But I don't want to interact with them. Again, the catfish slid against my legs. Did it want a pat? This dance went on for weeks. I moved around between spots, choosing places near faster-flowing water in the hope of discouraging it. It didn't. I forced myself to sit still and breathe.

I live in the rainforest so I'm used to wildlife. But this fish was getting under my skin. Why did it want to get so close? Nevertheless, cold-water immersion is supposed to be character building, to teach you that you can overcome discomfort, widen your horizons. The water may not yet have been really cold, but I had to cope with an inquisitive, personal-space-defying fish. But I was nothing if not committed, so I took my warm, sleepy body to the waterhole every morning for my daily dose.

- 31 In the first paragraph, what does the writer say about cold-water immersion?
- A She was tired of listening to other people talk about it.
 - B She knew it would be good for her if she did it for long enough.
 - C She wanted to try an activity that was popular in her local area.
 - D She thought it was something she might gradually get used to.
- 32 In the second paragraph, what does the writer say about her experience?
- A She believed the first few moments in the water ought to feel more challenging.
 - B She became aware of how much risk swimming in such cold water involves.
 - C She found spending time in such cold water less enjoyable than she had imagined.
 - D She was pleased to have access to such a convenient waterhole.
- 33 In the fourth paragraph, what does the writer emphasise?
- A how the location heightened her senses
 - B how unexpected the fish's behaviour was
 - C her awareness of the passage of time
 - D the fish's lack of concern about her presence
- 34 What does 'I hadn't been put off' in the fifth paragraph refer to?
- A the events of the day before.
 - B sticking to a schedule.
 - C how tired she was that morning.
 - D having to jump into the water.
- 35 In the fifth paragraph, the writer expresses her
- A need to understand her reaction to the catfish.
 - B desire to avoid any contact with the catfish.
 - C regret at having chosen a waterhole with catfish in it.
 - D fear that this particular catfish was dangerous.
- 36 In the final paragraph, what is the writer's main purpose?
- A to highlight her understanding of the natural world
 - B to explain why she kept on doing cold-water immersion
 - C to justify her lack of enthusiasm for cold-water immersion
 - D to question why she failed to deal with the catfish effectively

Part 6

Questions 37–42

Read an article about an experienced restaurant owner. Six sentences have been removed from the text below. For each question, choose the correct answer. There is one extra sentence which you do not need to use.
Mark your answers on the separate answer sheet.

What years of running restaurants has taught me

Alice May reflects on her successful career.

I opened my first restaurant in Philadelphia in 1997. When I think back on what makes me most proud about what I've achieved, it's being able to work with, and learn from, hundreds of talented staff and building a community with our customers.

Besides the young cooks and servers who have gone on to become chefs, managers or owners of restaurants, it's rewarding to have seen people express their love of food and hospitality in many other ways. 37 There's also a kitchen porter from Mali who didn't speak English but worked with us for six or seven years and eventually became a chef. These are the kinds of personal stories that bring me joy.

I've never thought of what I do as a job because I love it so much. I'm involved with all of my restaurants every single day, no matter what, either in person, by phone or via email. And after many years, I still enjoy the thrill of being in a busy dining room. The nervousness that I felt early in my career, when I was struggling for day-to-day survival, is still there, too. 38 But restaurant owners get bored easily, so I might miss the exhilaration of opening a new place and taking risks. At least it's a possibility – who knows?

39 It wasn't in my father's either. I grew up in a household where my father's expectations of me were extremely high. He always wanted me to be the top student in the class, always the best at whatever I did. It never struck me that I couldn't pursue any career. If I wanted to be a doctor, I could be a doctor. If I wanted to be a restaurant owner, I could be a restaurant owner. Why not?

That's still the foundation of my approach to life. And I've never seen myself as being a woman working in a man's world. I'm a competitive person by nature, so I want to compete with the best, no matter who they are or in whatever field. This was my attitude when I worked in other industries that were dominated by men. 40 Things have changed a lot since then, however.

I get a lot of young people asking me how they can get into the food business. My advice is to make sure they work in a restaurant if that's where they want to be. Find somebody you want to be like, and don't be shy about introducing yourself. 41 I've always been grateful for that, so in turn I try to make connections for others.

After all this time in the business, I've learnt that you have to accept change because you can't control it. 42 When we opened, I thought we were just going to be a little neighbourhood restaurant, so it's really an honour to have been nominated for major industry awards.

Test 4

- A I'd like to think that someday, I'll reach a point where it's no longer like that.
- B I had the same outlook when I attended business school, back when it was unusual for someone like me to be studying on business programmes.
- C That may be so, but while I'm right in the middle of all this, I sometimes think, 'Why am I doing this?'
- D A former employee who used to work for us washing dishes while in college, for instance, started his own company and is now helping us with our branding.
- E I didn't make it by doing it alone – people helped me along the way.
- F In fact, if they're able to adapt to the times, everyone has a real chance of success.
- G Failure's never been an option for me – it's not in my vocabulary.

Part 7

Questions 43–52

Read an article about four session musicians – freelance musicians who are hired to play on studio recordings with a solo artist or band. For each question, choose the correct section. Each section may be chosen more than once.

Mark your answers on the separate answer sheet.

Session musicians

Four musicians talk about their work in recording studios, accompanying solo artists or bands

A Maddie Chambers – singer

I was the lead singer in a band for 12 years. We had two minor hit records and toured a lot, but I wanted to have children and felt I needed something with a steadier income and more regular hours, so I went into session work. Certain things are hard to get used to. And if the main artist does something wrong, it's regarded as an artistic error, whereas the session musician who makes a mistake might not get hired again. That gets on my nerves, to be honest, as does the term 'backing singer'. I think of myself as someone who improves a piece of music. At least I'm doing music full time, which is all I've ever wanted work-wise since my early teens. I've sung on really famous recordings – too many to mention here – that have made a fortune for the artists and their record companies, and when I listen back to them, I always think that without my vocals, they wouldn't have been as good.

B Colin Armstrong – bass guitarist

I've been a session musician for over 30 years. Back in the 1990s, the bass was a fashionable sound in pop music, and music journalists often claimed that many songs were only hits because of my bass playing. Whether or not I'm in the spotlight has never been a major issue with me, but I've always known those claims didn't reflect reality – achieving a hit is about the quality of the song, the timing of its release, the way the artist looks – a mix of factors. The praise was good for my confidence, though, and I've never been short of work since then. In fact, I've always struggled to manage my workload. One reason for this is that if I'm interested in what a new band is trying to do, I'll reduce my fees so they can afford me. That isn't great for my bank balance – or for my health sometimes – but it's how I am. There's this rather offensive idea out there that while session musicians may play their instruments well, the fees are more important to them than anything else. I'm proof that's not the case.

C Ana Maria Ocampo – pianist

I've just finished a great week of sessions with an up-and-coming singer-songwriter. He's very generous with the conditions and pay rates he offers, which unfortunately is far from the case with a lot of session work, but I also appreciate his musical approach. He sits there strumming his guitar and starts singing, and we session musicians are expected to play along. We haven't heard the song before, so it's spontaneous and raw, and feels very creative, unlike most of the work I do, where the artist or producer tells you exactly what to play all the time. I originally wanted to be a solo artist, playing my own compositions, but over time I came to realise I'm not brave enough, or perhaps arrogant enough, to be the main focus of attention all the time. Being in the background is more my style. That's how most people probably think of session musicians, and I'd say they're right on the whole.

D Mo Amin – guitarist

About 50% of being successful in what I do comes down to musical ability and instrumental prowess. The rest involves social skills, listening to others with an open mind, turning up on time and various other things, including being discreet. Most of the famous musicians I've played with are very sensitive about their privacy and they don't like loose chat about the way they work or what they're like as individuals, and I do my best not to let them down in that regard. I do, however, feel privileged to make a living out of music, even though my income is nothing like what some people imagine a musician with my experience would get. I've been able to play a part in making records that people round the world listen to. Music is my biggest interest and passion, apart from my family, who I don't get to spend enough time with because I'm so busy. That's the one real downside of what I do.

Test 4

Which session musician

points out the need to be more than just a good musician?	43
accepts that others are more suited to the star role?	44
objects to a common assumption about session musicians?	45
is proud of having contributed to commercially successful work?	46
denies being mainly responsible for the success of some recordings?	47
is pleased to have fulfilled a long-held ambition?	48
is careful to respect the wishes of the stars?	49
appreciates being allowed to play with a degree of freedom?	50
mentions finding it hard to cope with being in considerable demand?	51
regrets the impact the work currently has on another area of life?	52

WRITING (1 hour 20 minutes)

Part 1

Question 1

You must answer this question.
Write your answer in 140–190 words in an appropriate style on the separate answer sheet.

- 1 In your English class you have been talking about taking risks. Now, your English teacher has asked you to write an essay.
- Write your essay using all the notes and giving reasons for your point of view.

Some people say it's good to take risks. What do you think?

Notes

Write about:

- in sport
- in business
- (your own idea)

Part 2

Questions 2–4

Write an answer to one of the questions in this part.
Write your answer in 140–190 words in an appropriate style on the separate answer sheet.
Put the question number in the box at the top of the answer sheet:

2 You see this announcement on an English-language website:

Reviews wanted

Have you ever been to see a live performance in a theatre – a play or a dance performance, for example?

We are looking for reviews of live performances that you've been to:

- tell us what you saw
- describe the performance and how you felt about it
- say who you think would enjoy seeing this performance.

The best reviews will be posted on our website.

Write your review.

3 You have received this email from your English-speaking friend Kim:

From: Kim

Subject: Help, please!

Hi,

Next month, two friends and I are going to be travelling around your country for about four weeks. We all speak your language pretty well, but need to know what behaviour is polite and impolite – we don't want to do anything wrong! Please tell us anything else we should know, for example about transport or the weather.

Thanks,

Kim

Write your email.

4 In your English class you have been talking about leisure time. Now, your teacher has asked you to write a report about a place where people can enjoy their leisure time in your area without needing to spend money.

- In your report, you should:
- describe the place
 - say what activities people can do there for free
 - suggest how this place could be improved.

Write your report.

LISTENING (approximately 40 minutes)

Part 1

Questions 1–8

For each question, choose the correct answer.

- 1 You hear a man telling a friend about having some flowers delivered.
What did he find surprising?
- A the condition of the flowers when they arrived
 - B the time it took for the flowers to be delivered
 - C the way in which the flowers were packaged
- 2 You hear two friends talking about whether they should buy electric bikes.
What do they both have doubts about?
- A how safe riding e-bikes would be
 - B how useful they would find e-bikes
 - C how easy e-bikes would be to maintain
- 3 You hear a woman talking to a friend about working from home.
What does she say about it?
- A It has improved her quality of life.
 - B It's something she'd recommend to others.
 - C It's likely she'll have to give it up.
- 4 You hear two teachers discussing use of the internet.
They agree that the internet
- A encourages people to focus on unimportant issues.
 - B reduces people's ability to remember things.
 - C has a negative effect people's levels of patience.

Test 4

- 5 You hear a man talking on a podcast interview about swimming.
Why does he prefer swimming in the sea rather than in a pool?
- A It is more natural.
 - B It is more demanding.
 - C It is more exciting.
- 6 You hear two friends talking about research into the sounds heard in wildlife habitats.
What will the research help scientists do?
- A establish the characteristics of particular species' habitats
 - B identify causes for concern in a variety of habitats
 - C set up conservation projects in habitats that are recovering
- 7 You hear a woman talking about a campaign in Australia to stop tourists feeding dolphins.
What is she doing?
- A identifying factors that have slowed down progress
 - B outlining the process that has been followed
 - C comparing the impact of different strategies
- 8 You hear a woman telling a friend about her plan to change her mealtime habits.
The man is unconvinced about
- A the evidence it's based on.
 - B her ability to stick to it.
 - C whether it'll fit in with her lifestyle.

Part 2

Questions 9–18

You will hear a woman called Jane Stevens talking about making pottery. For each question, write the correct answer. Write a word or short phrase.

Making pottery

When Jane was a child, she loved a 9 with a picture of an eagle on it.

Jane made a pottery sculpture called 10 ' ' in her final year at art college.

After leaving college, Jane met an 11 who showed her work to his clients.

One of Jane's popular early products was a jug with an unusual 12

Jane relies on 13 light when working in her studio.

Last year, Jane bought an expensive 14 to help with her back pain.

Jane has sold a lot of pottery at 15 recently.

Jane says that patterns featuring 16 have brought her most success.

Jane values the feedback she gets from 17

When talking about her personality, the word Jane uses to describe herself is 18 ' '.

Part 3

Questions 19–23

You will hear five short extracts in which people are talking about playing board games. How does each speaker say they have benefitted from playing board games?
For each question, choose the correct answer.
Use each answer only once. There are three extra answers which you do not need to use.

- Speaker 1 19

Speaker 2 20

Speaker 3 21

Speaker 4 22

Speaker 5 23
- A I have developed other interests as a result.

B I am more patient in other areas of my life.

C I feel that my approach to other games has improved.

D I can solve problems much more quickly.

E I am more accepting of my limitations.

F I have extended my friendship circle.

G I have found a way of dealing with pressure.

H I have developed better relationships with those close to me.

Part 4

Questions 24–30

You will hear an interview with a film director called Jim Logan.
For each question, choose the correct answer.

Listening test audio

- 24 What does Jim say about making his first videos?
- A He regrets making so many poor ones.
 - B He wishes he'd been more selective in what he filmed.
 - C He had the wrong priorities at the time.
- 25 Jim realised that after watching films, he should
- A discuss them with other people.
 - B consider how they might be improved.
 - C find out more about the team that created them.
- 26 When people who Jim knew did well, he discovered that
- A it increased his own chances of success.
 - B it made him more determined to improve.
 - C it had little impact on his friendships with them.
- 27 Why did Jim nearly give up making films?
- A The demands were too unpredictable.
 - B The working hours made his life too difficult.
 - C The pressure to deliver results was too great.
- 28 Jim says that many experienced filmmakers
- A would find it impossible to change career.
 - B develop ways of coping with negative reviews.
 - C have more job satisfaction as their working life progresses.

Test 4

29 How does Jim say he feels on a film set?

- A impressed by other people's ideas
- B excited about what will happen next
- C relieved when everything is going well

30 Jim advises people seeking employment in the film industry to

- A apply for as many jobs as they possibly can.
- B try to figure out what kind of work will suit them.
- C remain single-minded even if they encounter setbacks.